EPISODE THREE SYNOPSIS ~~of~~ "MYSTERIOUS PRISONER" ✓

Overhauling the plane, Robert climbs from his plane into Ann's. Steve, the pilot of Ann's ship, sees that they are almost over the Indian village so he cuts loose the parachute to which he has strapped Ann, hoping that she will land in the village. / The Indian grabs Robert around the neck and is forcing him over the side as Ann drifts to land.

But only for a short time does she manage to evade the clutches of the villainous and determined Baxter and Densmore. Falling once again into their toils, Ann is carried out of the State and carried across the line into a Yaqui Indian village in Mexico. There she is imprisoned in one of the adobe huts. When Winslow comes upon her there, he also finds hidden away in another one of the huts and held prisoner, a sorrowful old man who tells him he is John Calvin, grandfather of Ann. Winslow explains the situation to him and leaves to effect Ann's rescue.

Just as all three are going down into an underground passage, Baxter and John force their way into the cabin. Another fight occurs, but this time Ann, Winslow and the old man succeed in beating off their assailants in escaping through the underground passage. They make their way through this passage to the opening at the other side of the mountain. Baxter and John, seeing what they have done anticipate their leaving by the tunnel opening. They arrive there a short time after Ann and her party emerge. Before they get sight of the trio, Winslow and old man Calvin leave Ann and go one way, while she starts off alone, in the opposite direction. She manages to secure a horse and just as she is riding away Baxter and his gangsters come upon her. They pursue her and force her to leap from the top of a cliff into a lake below.

Ann lands safely in the lake and swims with her horse across to the opposite shore. John sends his man to hunt for Calvin and Robert while he and Baxter ride after Ann. She gains the lead on them and rides over the hill.
